When you're already working full time, job seeking can be a major time suck. In addition to all the time you spend researching which companies you're interested in, the application process itself can often take a surprisingly long time. From the time you click "Apply" to clicking "Submit," you often have to fill out dozens of fields with information that's already in your resume.

We think you deserve a better experience than that — so we rounded up a list of 13 companies you can apply to in just a couple minutes once you've uploaded your resume to Glassdoor. Apply to these companies during your lunch break, and you'll be able to spend less time job hunting and more time relaxing.
